I would definitely prefer to see less graphic and senseless violence in TV programming. As a parent, I can monitor what my children watch when I am with them, but there are many times when I am unaware of how violent a program will be until it's viewed as well as what they watch when they are visiting away from home. Even as my children have grown into their teen years, monitoring and discouraging the viewing of TV violence has become increasingly difficult. Please take measures to add more strict guidelines regarding appropriate subject matter to all programming for the sake of our future and the future of the family.

I encourage you to curb the violence on TV. The level of violence on TV has increased at an alarming rate. It has gotten so bad that I have drastically cut back on the amount of TV I let my grandchildren watch and I seldom watch TV anymore. The profanity used on TV programming has also reached a level that I find insulting. Thank you.

The Violence on Television has gotten out of hand. Even the cartoons are violent with rude and disrespectful language. If you look at the shows that have a huge audience, Touched by An Angel, The Waltons or Joan of Arcadia, provides proof people want WILL WATCH shows of a wholesome manner and DEMAND them ! As an organization who controls the context of the media, it is ethical and moral to rid our stations of the violence and gore. Our family is considering dropping cable and I know of several others who are/have dropped their dish connections.
